RE: Terry Cromwell

DATE: December 18, 1978

Terry has proven himself to be an extremely valuable intern. He has worked directly under my supervision on a number of cases; however, his work in the case of Commonwealth v. Supreme Remodeling, Inc., a civil and criminal contempt action, has been outstanding. He prepared witnesses for trial, drafted memoranda of law, and collected photographs and documentary evidence. This was a complex case which he handled thoroughly and competently. I found that he was particularly adept at counseling and preparing witnesses. He also completed a tremendous amount of preparatory work in a relatively short period of time indicating to me that he is a hard worker capable of handling the pressures of deadlines and complexities of trial practice. In addition, he has an easy going disposition, which will serve him well both in court and as a negotiator.

I believe this memorandum is necessary to supplement the interim questionnaire forwarded to me because the exceptional quality of his work deserves special note.
